Event Report:

Appalling weather (50mm rainfall over the weekend) meant we had to fall back on the planned wet weather programme. With such bad weather we were surprised that anyone turned up at our remote location, chosen for virtually no light pollution and normally fab stars. The series of talks and demonstrations went well, and we were especially pleased that two families attended, with the mums and young children interacting with activities enthusiastically. The 60 university students at the centre for weekend indicated they would have participated if telescopes had been set up, and we had received many phone enquiries from local families leading up to event - so we will try again and hope for better weather!
